OFFICIAL VISITORS GUIDE

LIFE IN COLOR

HISTORIC DULUTH

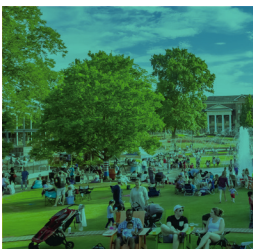

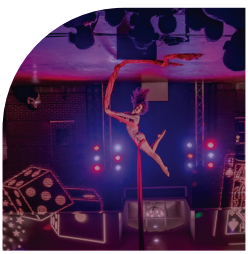

DULUTH, GA:
A RAINBOW OF POSSIBILITIES

To an outsider, Duluth may seem like any other small, Southern town with a rich history. And while those things are true, a visit to Duluth will prove there's something more. There is vibrancy. Thanks to the public art scattered around town, it's easy to see. But stay long enough and you'll start to taste it, hear it and feel it everywhere you go.

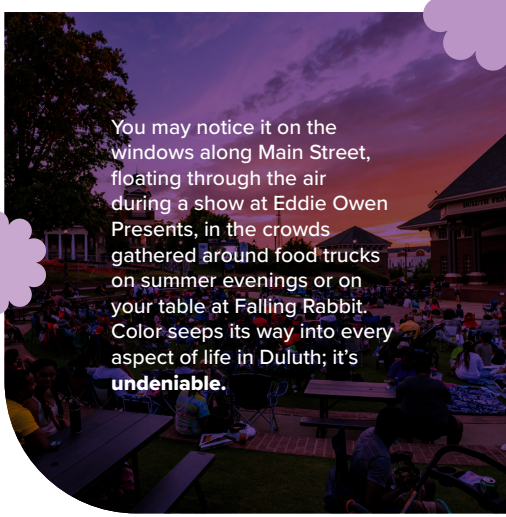

You may notice it on the windows along Main Street, floating through the air during a show at Eddie Owen Presents, in the crowds gathered around food trucks on summer evenings or on your table at Falling Rabbit. Color seeps its way into every aspect of life in Duluth; it's undeniable.

PAINT YOUR BLUES AWAY

It's hard to find a colorless corner of Duluth. You'll catch a work of art from nearly any vantage point, but that's how we prefer it. Why leave buildings, parks and crosswalks as they are when they could be transformed into swoon-worthy masterpieces?

See if you can spot all 10 of these public art pieces scattered around Duluth!

1. PHOENIX

This spinning piece of kinetic art was the first of its kind and color in Duluth.

2. MEET ME ON MAIN

This newest work of art offers a colorful glimpse into Duluth's history.

3. PLUME

4. DREAM BIG

5. GENTLY DOWN THE STREAM

6. CITY HALL MOSAICS

7. MELODY LANE

TECHNICOLOR TIDBITS

LUCKY CRICKETS

Don't be surprised if you encounter a few artful crickets during your time in downtown Duluth. Our city was home to the last cricket box factory in Georgia, run by Joe Fanning, who operated out of the a brick warehouse building on Main Street where the Red Clay Music Foundry now stands.

OVER 160 ANNUAL EVENTS

We know a thing or two about celebration. That's why we do it over 160 times throughout the year! From summer Fridays-N-Duluth to cool weathered farmers market days to cookies and cocoa in the winter, all of our community events are completely free to attend!

A RAIL HUB

From the historic train depot built in 1871 came a 50,000-acre rail area used during the cotton trade. With easy access to Atlanta and one of a few counties with rail service, trains still run through Duluth today, 145 years later.

THE EASTERN CONTINENTAL DIVIDE

Don't leave town without a stop by the Eastern Continental Divide monument. Tucked away in the green space in front of City Hall, the marker marks the place where water flows in two different directions. Water to the left of the marker flows into the Atlantic Ocean, while water on the right flows to the Gulf of Mexico.
